To William Lloyd Garrison

No.12

Office of the American Anti-Slavery Society, New York. Refers to an outrage committed by the "Reform" Convention in Pennsylvania. E. W. and J. G. Whittier suggest that the Pa. Abolitionists "submit to the electors a powerful & manly appeal against the new constitution ..." The colored people have been advised by their white friends not to oppose the new constitution, but E. W. feels that they should put forth their greatest effort against it. Suggest that W.L.G. ought to stir them up with one of his "'trumpet-calls' in the Liberator."

There are five such societies, the fifth recently formed among the Friends. Gives the opinion of people in regard to the forthcoming Convention. Hope has been expressed that "it may be strictly an Anti-Slavery Convention," - without the intrusion of other interests. The writer expresses her religious convictions in relation to the spirit of the Convention. Transmits a message from Mrs. Cox that she expects the addressee and Mrs. Maria Weston Chapman to stay with her when they are in New York. A.L.S. 4 p. 9 3 4 x 7 3/4

New York. Is much upset by "the discord which has arisen among our Brethren in Massachusetts." J. Leavitt plans to publish in the Emancipator "an exact fac-simile of the first number of the Liberator," probably to show how far it has departed from its original purposes. Has for a long time feared the "disorganizing effects" of the introduction of topics not relevant to the Anti-Slavery course. "I cannot admit that our Anti Slavery Brethren should oppose us only because we are humble Preachers." Discusses the treatment of the Clerical Appeal in the Liberator. Objects to the stubbornness of some of the Abolitionists who are trying to force the adoption of "do [redacted] and measures altogether severed from the Abolition of Slavery." A. A. Phelps's "sneers and insinuations" against W.L.G. injure the cause. Objects to the publication of the Abolitionist.

Didn't expect Non-Resistance to "produce such a state of feeling as it has in the professing Friends of the oppressed. . ." Says that 3 months ago it was proposed to send the writer to Liberia to investigate the "state of the Colonists," but an objection was raised on the ground that he had adopted W.L.G.'s "no government" doctrine.

The Executive Committee has voted to dissolve the American Anti-Slavery Society at its next meeting. The proposition was made by way of an inquiry from John G. Whittier in the Pennsylvania Freeman. The object is to take the management of the Anti-Slavery cause out of the hands of the people, especially to exclude women, and to have a new organization "more purely political." The "Political Anti-Human Rights abolitionists" rely largely on the young men of New York. The abolition lies mainly in Whiggism or Locofocoism." „Sans Souci, New York,“ The writer gives a detailed report of the anniversary meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society. Francis Jackson as chairman was authorized to appoint a business committee. The appointment of Abby Kelley caused a storm. The viva voce being doubted, the votes were counted and stood about 557 to 451 in Miss Kelley's favor. Lewis Tappan gave four reasons why he could not work on the committee with a woman, and Ellis Gray Loring refuted these reasons. A. A. Phelps declined serving on the committee. The writer describes various speeches-„David Lee Child spoke capitally“ -and states that "when we b[redacted] up it was settled that we had achieved a glorious victory."

To Helen Eliza (Benson) Garrison

«New York: The Columbus could not sail today. May be late for opening of the World Convention. If not, the "woman question" will be brought up. Lucretia Mott is among the delegates appointed by the American Anti-Slavery Society. G. Bourne is against "woman's rights." W.L.G. meditates on his love for his wife and children. Is distressed by the poor health of his brother James. Prays that he may repent. «N. P.» Rogers and W.L.G. were hospitably entertained at Mrs. Truesdell's. Addressed a colored audience in T. S. Wright's meeting-house.

New York. A confidential communication about the necessity of finding an editor for the National Anti-Slavery Standard until the return of (Nathaniel Peabody) Rogers. "James C. Jackson is a spirited writer but his field is eminently the platform;" he has been "doing grandly" in western New York the last few weeks. James S. Gibbons has time only for an occasional article. Transmits reports about the condition of the Friend of Man and the Emancipator. William Goodell's "recent assault upon the Standard has made us friends & lost him many." The writer maintains that "my health is not equal to the position I occupy." [New York] The American Anti-Slavery Society is sending J. A. Collins to England to raise money for the Abolitionist cause. Would not ask the English Abolitionists for help ordinarily and explains why it is necessary giving as reasons the Presidential campaign, the business depression, and lack of support by Abolitionists in name only. The American Anti-Slavery struggle differs from its English counterpart. With us Slavery is omnipotent." Mentions the division between the Old and New Organizations. Reports on the controversy between N. Colver and Gerrit Smith over the admission of women to Anti-Slavery meetings. The American & Foreign A-S Society holds the same views on the subject as those set forth in the Clerical Appeal. Criticizes the sale of the Emancipator. Mentions the establishment of the Nat. New York. The addressee is often in the writer's mind, "and always as pleasant as a gleam of sunshine." The writer's life in New York is "monotonous and secluded in the extreme. I go nowhere, and nobody comes to see me. The tedious paper brings the same round of distasteful duties every week." Finds anti-slavery "pretty much defunct in this region," and old organization represented only by James S. Gibbons and Isaac T. Hopper's family. Nevertheless, the writer thinks "there is more real, though less perceptible progress than ever." Writes at length about the Turpin (colored) children, in whom the writer is interested. Inquires if the Baily school in New Bedford would be desirable for placing the two . Suggests that the «New York.» Reports on a visit to Pennsylvania. The Standard has great favor with the abolitionists there; some even talk of uniting the Freeman with it, though the writer thinks such an arrangement most improbable. "They all agree that C.C.B. (Charles Calistus Burleigh) is not half as good an editor as lecturer. . . they are seriously talking of inviting Wendell Phillips to the editorial chair!" Comments on the Standard under Mrs. Lydia Maria Child's editorship; it is "a very agreeable paper... but I could wish it had in it more of the Liberator fire. It does not sufficiently expose the corruption of the Church ... Its agreeableness is attracting the support of some half-and-half, milk-and-water [redacted] of abolitionists ... It is

«New York.» The writer has returned from a visit to two counties of Pennsylvania where he found a "revival of anti-slavery feeling," and the abolitionists "almost unanimously in favor of Old Organization." The letter is mainly concerned with the proposal to hold the anniversary meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society at Philadelphia in December. The Executive Committee has instructed the writer to correspond with friends in different parts of the country to ascertain their opinions. The writer, favoring the plan, presents five reasons for his decision. The (Executive) Committee has requested the writer to lecture and collect funds in Ohio and Indiana, "particularly among the Quakers there."

«New York: Sends the article for the Liberty Bell. "You and Caroline «Weston» will laugh at it heartily, and even little Anne «Warren Weston» will give it a patte de velours; but the young and romantic will like it." The writer is plagued by Third Party. "James C«aleb» Jackson is coaxing all he can to stop the Standard... and Garrison is helping him with puffs innumerable." The writer declares that the Liberator lauds the Liberty Party, that Francis Jackson and Wendell Phillips "are flourished forth on the Librty ticket" and that she expects to see Garrison put up for Governor and Edmund Quincy for Congress. "Am I to hold the Standard of moral influence all alone?" The Pennsylvania [redacted] man is seeking a union with Postscript: "I rejoice that you approve my editing. I thought I was too cautious to please you; but... my caution plagues New Org. worse than anything."

The contribution to the Liberty Bell referred to is probably the story "The Quadroons" in the volume for 1842, p. 115-141.

"I am sorry to say Gibbons defends his conduct in the Disclaimer." The writer saw Mrs. Lydia Maria Child "looking very bright," but said to be "scared to death" by mob threats. Relates the proceedings at the Anniversary Meeting in the Tabernacle. Of the speakers; "C.C. Burleigh did well enough; I never greatly admired him. Wendell Phillips, was as usual very beautiful & George Bradburn made his usual amount of jokes..." At the business meeting, "owing to Abby Kelly's iniquity," the writer was nominated one of the assistant secretaries. Expects the question of the dissolution of the Union to be brought up today.

"Garrison in a very foolish manner has staid away," and has written a letter practically asking the Society to judge between him and the Executive Committee. The afternoon was spent discussing the attitude to be taken toward John Quincy Adams. The writer, having tea at the Charles Mariotts', was surprised at their magnificence - for Quakers. Mrs. Marriott and her sister seemed "perfect specimens of Quaker selfrighteousness." Continuing at Concert Hall at 10 o'clock; Stephen S. Foster is stirring all up, saying that politics are sinful. The dissolution of the Union has been debated, Ellis G. Loring against it, Henry C. Wright in favor. No prospect of a mob.

New York. By the Liberator the writer perceives that the feeling caused by the "Correction" is subsiding. Expresses his gratitude for the addressee's consideration in discouraging reference to the correction. "It is obvious to ourselves that we are misapprehended on almost every point of the 'correction,' both in language & purpose." The writer agrees with the addressee on the general uselessness of disclaimers, but thinks that a rule on this point would tend "to involve a want of just condescension to the weakness or ignorance of others." The writer plays on the words "moral incendiarism" and tells of cases of actual fires in his neighborhood. Contrasting "Boston policy with standard policy," the writer sees more of moral incendiarism in the latter, "not so much

New York. Welcomes the addressee's free expression on the subject of the "correction." The writer, who does not value his own opinion highly, is disposed to quarrel only about the right of opinion. "A spiritual Procrustes is a monster." Discusses the relativity of points of view as exemplified by Henry C. Wright's different attitudes toward the "correction" in Philadelphia and in New York-Boston. "Our object was so direct, that we did not dream of the inference & implications that have been drawn from it." The writer wants to see the addressee on his brier visit to Boston. New York. Sends the address of Ezra C. Smith, to whom Mrs. Maria W. Chapman has undertaken to write concerning "the matter of harnessing with politicians." Ezra C. Smith proposes that C. H. Weld be appointed his associate agent. "Weld says, tho' not a member of 3d party, 'he can, with equal heartiness & good will, cooperate with brethren who are, in promoting the great general principles of the Anti S. enterprise'...." The writer received a letter from Arnold Buffum, who presents a three year old claim of $60, considering "that we are 'the legitimate Americana Society'." The writer would like to know the addressee's view on the matter, his own being that such claims are "very illegitimate." Describes his voyage home after his visit to Boston.

New York. "We frequently talked of Henry & G. Chapman's health with hopes & fears." Mrs. L. M. Child "placed the account of the Mammoth Cave in a conspicuous part of the paper Nat. Anti-Slavery Standard, to attract your attention." Discusses the small risk for the Chapmans in the South and the guaranty that could be afforded by letters from physicians. Regrets that "under pressure of extremest need" one cannot pass a boundary line without exposure to outrage. Prophecies that "the curse of slavery, will go out in blood!" Complains of the many who live only for self. Refers to the Philadelphia riot. Favors repeating principles. "There are thousands to whom the light would come, were it not that Dr. Channing & such as he interfere with it." The writer casts doubt on the Abolitionism of (W. H.) Furness. Notes the Philadel-

New York. The demand for Anti-Slavery books has been "very trifling, compared with the period before the division." The New York Executive Committee proposes that the addressee furnish books that can be spared from the Boston shelves. Replying to the addressee's request for the New York Committee's book of records, the writer says: "The Constitution of the Society provides that the Ex Comtee (Executive Committee) shall be located in New York. If its record book, & the date of its official action be in Boston, the centrality of the society will in effect be removed there, which will expressly transcend the Constitution." The Committee is ready to hear the other side.

New York. The writer expresses the state of mind of the New York Executive Committee of the American Anti-Slavery Society as "under a sense of dispiritment." A quorum of the committee resident in Boston was appointed to act coordinately with the central portion in New York. Now "the Society is essentially removed to Boston - an express violation of our Constitution... Our Committee encounter these difficulties: We have the responsibility of our office - but our Boston friends proceed to appoint an office agent with whom we have no acquaintance, without consulting us." New York: The writer, having read her husband's (James S. Gibbons's) letter, finds it too tame. Being sensitive where her father (Isaac T. Hopper) is concerned, when a reduction of his salary was proposed, she thought "that it would have been well if a spirit of economy had so far prevailed last year as to have withheld J.A.Collins who was the means of bringing the Society in debt pretty extensively." The writer states: "we are unanimous and decided that we have no right to remove the Executive Committee from New York or its Books." Believes that it was understood that the quorum in Boston were to be considered as advisors. New York. Having received a letter from Jacob Ferris with the information that $50, pledged at Cadiz, Ohio, had been paid to the American Society and the request that it be charged to Ferris's account, the writer has this scruple: "This would be in contravention of the specific understanding that the Western mission should be dependent on donations received as the fruit of its own exertions." Thinks that Ferris "could not have been properly advised."

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

New York. Doubts the desirability of holding 300 conventions. Has not received favorable reports from the Western Conventions. "Privately, and I think from impartial sources, I have heard that these conventions have not done much good." Fault was not found with the agents. Quotes Virgil to the effect that "I (i.e. "we") have worked, but others have taken the honors." The writer would not be able to leave New York, as the Standard takes all his week days and Sundays. Discusses the qualifications of Richard Hildreth, mentioning his "propensity to enter party combinations and electioneering." The writer declares that he himself is "a faithful dog and will remain so, even if upon the suggestion of the wolves the flock should discard me." A(bby) K(easley) has written to James S.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

New York. Is flattered by the writer's recollection of their former acquaintance, when they met in company with Mr. and Mrs. (Joshua) Bates. While the writer utterly condemns the institution of slavery, in his view "the magnitude of the evil, in the vast numbers involved, has always presented itself to me as an insurmountable difficulty," and he considers it one of those abuses which will be cured "rather by the progress of general intelligence and a higher standard of character than by direct and forcible interference." The writer must therefore deny himself the pleasure of acting with the addressee.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«New York: When in Bath, Me., the writer read a letter from the addressee to Mrs. Waldren, asking her to write for the Liberty Bell and "to extend the request to the other friends of the slave in that vicinity." The writer is therefore sending a slight contribution, which the addressee may use or pass on to Mr. Garrison. Has seen Mrs. «Lydia Maria» Child and Mr. and Mrs. «Isaac T.» Hopper. "What a very agreeable, interesting old gentleman Friend Hopper is!" Comments on his vigor at 73.

New York. The writer acknowledges receipt of another copy of the Liberty Bell. She is unhappy in New York and would rather be actively engaged in Anti-Slavery work. Reports I. Hopper's health as improving. Mr. Smith's illness was caused by his attempt "to save the life of another man who was on fire from the same lamp." Comments on the odd appearance and kindly nature of Orson S. Murray. W. H. Channing reminds the writer of Garrison. Referring to Channing as the antagonist of John A. Collins at the Reform Conventions in Boston, the writer begs for information about Channing's conduct there. A New York lady received letters in which he was accused of being "angry as a madman."

New York: The writer regrets that he cannot be present at the Fair and recalls his intimate association with his Boston anti-slavery friends, alluding especially to the addressee's magnanimity. The beautiful articles which the writer encloses were made in Wilmington, Delaware, a slave state, by Margaret D. Gibbons, sister of James S. Gibbons. Asks that these articles be laid on the table of the Southwicks. Cassius M. Clay furnished his autographs at the writer's request. Clay will write for the Tribune. "If he does not fall into the slough of Third Party, he will yet do a great work for Freedom." The addressee's "Prophecy" was a most welcome contribution to the Tribune; suggests that she write for this paper, which has a circulation of 45,000. The writer is now exclusively employed in the editorial depart-

"Tribune Office, New York. Explains the enclosure of eighteen dollars. Expresses pleasure in the addressee's report of the fair in the last Liberator. States parenthetically that the writer "located Mary Anne [Mrs. Johnson] at Auburn instead of Sing Sing. The places are some 300 miles apart. But no matter". The reception for Cassius Clay was satisfying; people applauded sentiments, when coming from him, "for which all faithful abolitionists have suffered reproach and persecution." The writer wishes an account for the Tribune of the meeting this week. If the writer cannot do it, "Edmund Quincy perhaps will".

New York(City). The writer claims that the Mess. A-S Soc'y.
made no attempt to prove its assertions that his book contained false statements. Says he did not write as a partisan.
Declares that most of the "Anti-Slavery labor of the country (political, ecclesiastical and moral) has been conducted outside of either of these National Societies..." Explains his relationship to William Harned. A member of the American & Foreign A-S Soc'y thinks the writer's book is unfair to his organization, and another member characterizes certain pass-
